

Advocates New Bridge on Red to Elmwood

Alderman Midwinter is on the war-path once more, this time for a new bridge across the Red river into his beloved suburb. The proper location for such a bridge, he thinks would be at Kelvin street, which would put it nearly midway between Lourse and Redwood bridges. According to the doughty alderman from Elmwood the traffic on the two bridges is already too much for comfort or convenience, and he figures that by the time a new bridge could be finished the present bridges will be badly congested. He proposes bringing the matter before the council in the near future, and will ask that a by-law be submitted to the people at the first opportunity. There will be some considerable opposition to be overcome in the council, however before it reaches that stage, as there are several aldermen who figure that the next new bridge will have to be a good deal nearer the centre of the city. —Free Press.
